Our May meeting was a good one. Everyone is getting excited about the Derby and getting things ready for it. Pete Scott is doing a fantastic job on the Derby.

Our door prizes were won by Anne Faukenberry, which was a Thermos bottle and Chuck Dernberger won a men's hat and last but not least, "Boobie Prize" Reid won a little clock.

Our steak dinners at the Moose have gone up to $4.50 per dinner and that is still a bargain, guys. To take your wife or girlfriend out for under $10.00 and enjoy a steak dinner and be with wonderful friends at the Cholla Bay Meeting, is worth every cent. By the way, guys, if any of your wives can't attend a meeting and a dinner, I will go in their place.

Shirley Reid showed us some slides of her trip that she and Gene and the Boyles, Tom and Diane, took to Copper Canyon. It sure looks like they had a wonderful time. What a beautiful place! Shirley also presented a nice film of Chihuahue. Thanks Shirley.

Happy Fathers Day to all Fathers. You can get that special guy a wonderful gift from our Ship's Store. We have a good supply of everything he would need. Support our Club.

I'll have lots more to write next month after the Derby. So until then, take care and vist Cholla Bay

Our May 12th meeting was ladies night. President, Dave Connors went to Cholla Bay, and Vice President, Jack Ebert was in New York City, so Treasurer, Fran Johnson was acting President and we all agreed that she did an excellent job. Secretary, Mary Reinert filled in for the rest. Elnora Westfall took over Ship's Store, so these fine ladies showed us how it is done. We had our introductions and that was fun as usual. There were so many single people, that Nancy LaPointe (Chatter Editor) laughingly said next month we should have a singles meeting following the general meeting, so you singles come on out. Who knows what will develop.

New members, Nub Moore and Stevie, Jim and Sharon Olson and Olson's guest, Hal Perry, Ernest and Frances Bradbury from Florida, friends of the Paul Schoonovers. Von Gottbreht brought as her guest, a fine little lady, her grand-daughter, Jaime Gottbreht. Now she needs to tie or beat the boys fishing and get her spread in the Chatter. Thanks so very much to all of you dear people for coming, and please do hurry back.

Elnora Westfall of Ship's Store reported good sales for the month of April. Wanda Lee of membership reported a drop to 959 members. Hope some of you will pay your dues and get back on the list. We need you. Hilda Erkert of Sick Bay had some very sad news to report. Mary Parker's loving husband, Louis (Lou) passed away from a heart attack on April 23rd. The following week, Bill Frienaer, of the Tucson Chapter, passed away, as did Alice Taylor. We all send our deepest sympathy to their families and friends.

CORRECTION - I need a hearing aid, or need to have a kink taken out of my brain. I made a mistake in the last chatter regarding the $100.00 Jack Pet. Half of the money goes to the skipper of whose boat catches the largest fish during Derby Days, and the other half will be donated to the Radio Shack for its needs. SORRY about that, Glenn.

Paul Schoonover brought back many fond memories with his movies of yesteryear of Cholla Bay. All of the water front looked bare as you rode out to the sea. And you waited for the tide to launch your boat. A launching ramp was but a dream. In those days there were many, many fish - oh! so many sail and dolphin. Paul can tell you some tall fish stories and all of them are true. Thank you for a very interesting evening Paul.

After the movie, we had door prizes and most of us called it a day. 3rd prize, a Queen Planter, was won by Alene Miller. 2nd prize went to Betty Williams, a hat (don't lose this one Betty), 1st prize, a jacket went to Mark Miller.

We were also reminded of the dance on Sept. 11th at the Western Saddle Club, and the picnic on Oct. 9th.

Until next time, keep your cool and catch the bigie.

OUR TRIP TO EL GULFO
Shelly Bock

Early one chilly November morning, an adventurous group, Bucky and Glenda Maude, Ed and Marty Perlmutter, Lou and Shelly Bock and Wally Schmerfield, left Cholla Bay in search of the great town, El Gulfo. El Gulfo is a fishing village located 90 miles north of Cholla Bay close to the Yuma border. Bundled up and raring to go, in vehicles loaded to the hilt with needed supplies, mostly cerveza, the weekend excursion began.

We were only two miles out of Cholla Bay, on the Black Mountain Road, laughing and talking when suddenly Wally began frantically jumping up and down in the back seat of Lou and Shelly's V.W. Thing. "Watch out.!", he screamed. Swerving quickly, we just barely missed rear-ending Bucky and Glenda's beach buggy. Boy that was a close one. We backed up to the beach buggy to find out why they had stopped, and saw that the dash on the ignition was smoking and Bucky was grasping at wires in the back of the car. Already we had experienced a near accident and an electrical fire, and were not quite sure if we were going to make it. However, after taking the dash board apart, taping several wires together, disconnecting a few others and with spirits high we proceeded down the road. We passed Black Mountain and headed towards the shell cliffs.

As we neared the cliffs, Bucky's beach buggy began overheating, so we pulled to the side of the road to let it cool down. Glenda decided this was the perfect time for her famous "Tornadoes". If you have never had any of Glenda's Tornadoes, you'll have to go up to her cabin and ask her to mix one for you. It is a delicious drink and a real eye opener too, especially at 9:00 in the morning.

Back in the vehicles, after finishing the refreshments, we drove north away from the beach area into the desert toward the first railroad station. On this long barren road, which seemed endless, Bucky's beach buggy began having heating problems again. We stopped about every fifteen minutes to let the car cool down while we drank beer and tornadoes. By 12:00 noon, we still had not reached the second railroad station. We were now approximately two hours behind our estimated travel schedule.

When we neared the sand dunes Bucky took the wrong road, leading him straight into the mud flats, where he promptly became quite immovable. So far none of the problems we encountered had yet to stop us and when we saw a railroad work car with lots of mexican neighborly help coming down the track, we knew it was our lucky day. Of course I'm sure they didn't think the gringos and gringas in the two overloaded vehicles in the middle of nowhere, stuck in the mud flats was an unusual site, so they cheerfully jumped off the work car and came to our rescue. They freed the beach buggy by digging a trench under the back tire, placing a railroad tie into it and pushing the buggy while the V.W. Thing pulled. We offered our new friends beer for their kindness but they turned it down. Today was tequila day for them as they held up their bottle and waved goodbye.

Everyone was sure excited to hop back into the mud-filled buggy, but it didn't spoil our fun and off we went. After crossing several more dunes we finally had the second railroad station in site. It is approximately forty miles from Cholla Bay to this railroad station and the point where we began driving towards the beach. This is a well traveled, graded road which we later learned is the road to the salt mines. Here we passed two, ten-wheeler trucks, both carrying enormous loads of salt. As we neared the beach, we saw several square miles of land where they mine salt. At high tides, ocean water is pumped into these flat lands. When the water evaporates, the remaining salt is picked up by tractors, loaded into trucks and taken to the railroad station. For those of you who fish, the salt mines are located directly behind the double dunes.

After reaching the beach, which is approximately 20 miles from the second railroad station, Wally (the rockhound) Schmerfield, told us all about the fossilized sea shells which lay scattered around the beaches in this area. We also passed a few cliffs which were also fossilized.

About fifteen miles down the beach, we came upon a fishing village. There were fifty or so pongas in this small town which are mainly used for hunting shark. Hundreds of shark heads lay scattered upon the beach. The flies and smell of this town was atrocious. Because none of us had ever been to El Gulfo, we thought this might be the place. Hoping and praying that it wasn't, we left quickly to look further down the beach.

About ten miles from the fishing village, in a bay area, scattered ramadas and a cantina overlooked beautiful, clean white beaches. We had found El Gulfo. We had a few more hours until darkness, so we took a leisurely tour of the town. The homes are very quaint and covered with much greenery. There are also many restaurants, supermarkets and gas stations in such a small town and everything is extremely clean. The people of El Gulfo are very friendly and helpful to the gringos.

After seeing the town, we drove back to the ramada areas to make camp. We unloaded, had a few relaxing drinks and hors-de-ourves (chips) then watched one of the most spectacular sunsets we had ever seen. The bay danced and sparkled as if on fire and held the majestic shrimp boats silhouetted against giant redish orange mountains. We were mesmerized by this sunset until the glowing ball of fire became darkness.

SHARING OUR SUNWORSHIPPER & COMFORT N'
JOY ON EASTER - By Noel Jordan

Our two kids and their two friends agreed to spend Easter weekend with us at Cholla Bay and out on the boat at San Jorge Bay.

Friday morning ater "assembling" all night, the six of us headed out in our boat to Bird Island. Accompanying us were our buddy boats, HONEY BUN, with 2-60lb Golden Retrievers and TWEETY, with 3 Toy Poodles! (shark bait)

The water was like a millpond - the kids, 22 & 23 years old never sat still. Gosh young people move alot! Finally we had to tell them to sit still so that we could hold a trim on the SUN-WORSHIPPER.

At Bird Island the kids caught Sierra - flinging them into the boat rather than depositing them into the fish box on the swim platform. You guessed it - a bloody mess!

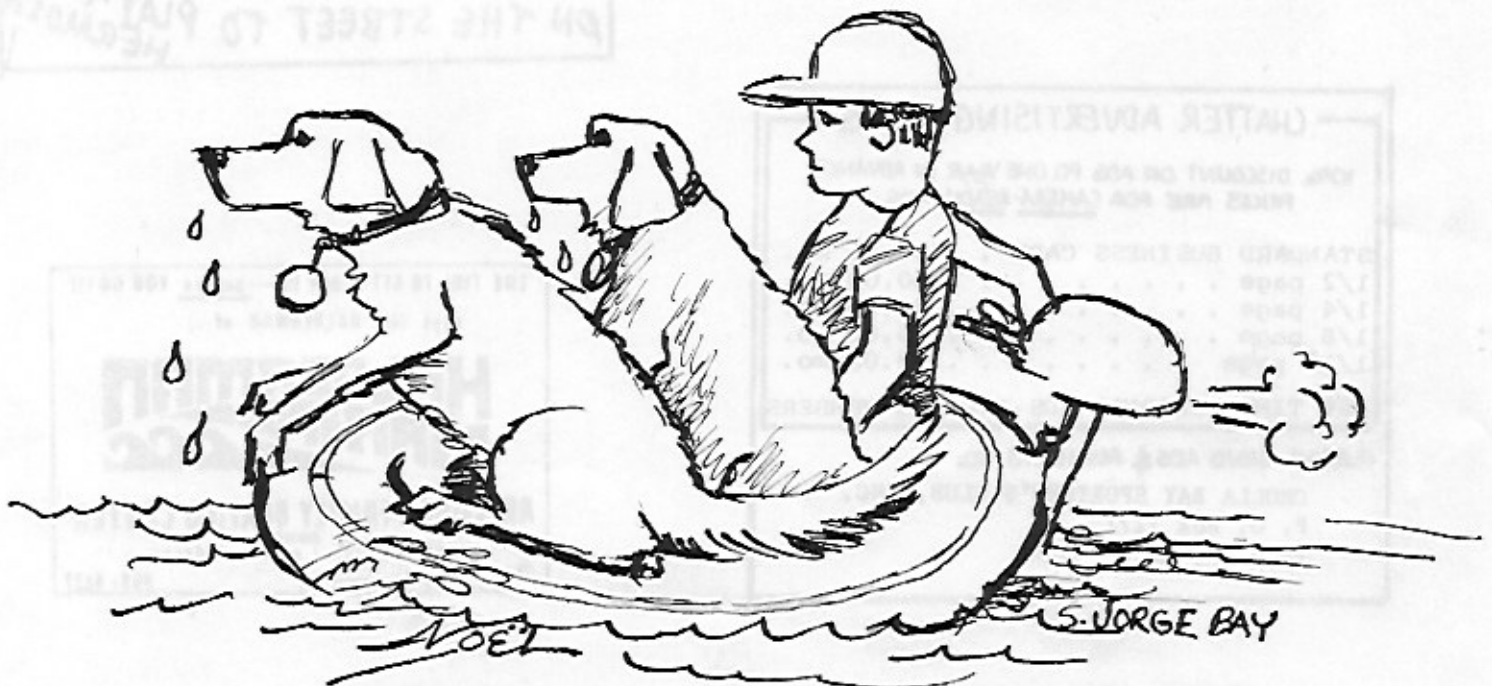

As we trolled, we hooked a Blue Footed Booby. The kids felt so sad while we de-hooked and gave first aid to the bird. It was lunchtime & HONEY BUN seeing all this radioded that it was KENTUCKY FRIED BOOBY time!

In the afternoon we headed for our anchorage at San Jorge where we side-tied with HONEY BUN & TWEETY. We flew our kite, almost losing it in the current. The kids all flung crabs into the boat, not into the box - we all avoided claws, yipes!

During this our buddy boats launched their small rubber dingy and outboard loaded with retrievers and MIKE ELBERT to go for " a walk on shore". When Mike and the labs came back near our boat, Clive said, "I sure wish I had a stick".

During our seafood dinner, our young people entertained the 6 adults and 5 dogs with all kinds of jokes. Boy, if I thought our generation knew jokes -- I sure learned alot.

The following morning (Saturday) we cruised back to Bird and then headed to Pelican Point in calm seas. We had a steak & fish BBQ that evening and Clive and I planned to launch and go fishing early Easter Sunday and our four young people wished to drive home. We had good fishing and returned to Cholla about noon, meeting our friends, HONEY BUN & TWEETY on their return. Clive & I found our rig left in beautiful order with a lovely Seri Quail sculpture for "mom" as a thank you.

We three gals prepared an Easter lunch and the boys hooked up the rigs for the trip home. After "grace" for a saft trip & good food, we asked our friends to follow us as we a minor trailer problem. About halfway back to Rocky Point, TWEETY called and said they were stuck in the sand. At the arches, we turned the whole rig around and found their rig spinning up to the hubcaps. With the help of Manuel (launcher) with his 4 wheel drive towing the TWEETY, we winched out the motor home. Then the HONEY BUN called. They, too, were stuck! We repeated our act and pulled their rig to safty.

We all are such good friends and if the tide turns we know we are all there to help. It was a very Happy Easter.
